

BEGINNING, MIDDLE, AND END

Discover how a tree's wounds and decay bring new life to the forest ecosystem in this lyrical nonfiction picture book for fans of Because of an Acorn and A Stone Sat Still.

Written by Leslie Barnard Booth
Illustrated by Stephanie Fizer Coleman
Publisher: Margaret K. McElderry Books
In Stores: March 26, 2024
Length: 40 pages
ISBN13: 9781534496965
Grades: P - 3
Ages 4 - 8

INTRODUCTION

You can use the informational picture book One Day This Tree Will Fall to explore beginning, middle, and end and to write your own story with this structure.

MATERIALS

- Beginning/Middle/End graphic organizer (included below)
- Brainstorm worksheet (included below)
- Lined paper

STEPS

- Discuss the concepts of beginning, middle, and end, explaining the role of each story part.
- Introduce One Day This Tree Will Fall. Set a purpose for reading: Ask students to think about what happens at the beginning, middle, and end of the book.
- Read the book to the class.
- Discuss the book and have students fill out the Beginning/Middle/End graphic organizer.
- Ask students to think about something in nature that grows and changes. They can brainstorm using the Brainstorm worksheet.
- Now invite students to choose a topic from their Brainstorm worksheet and write and illustrate a short story about it that has a beginning, middle, and end.

Name:

Draw or write what happened at the beginning, middle, and end of the book.

Beginning

Middle

End

Name:

Brainstorm

Make a list of things in nature that grow and change.
Then choose the one you want to write about.

Ideas

<hr/>	<hr/>
<hr/>	<hr/>
<hr/>	<hr/>
<hr/>	<hr/>
<hr/>	<hr/>
<hr/>	<hr/>
<hr/>	<hr/>

